TUESDAY'S FULL PROCEEDINGS.

Judge Garber, continuing his argument, aid he thought he bad sufficiently shown that there was no distinction between the New York and California practice, in re-TUESDAY, April 8.

The argument on the admissibility of evidence tending to prove the fraudulency of the Hermes title was continued by Judge Mesick, of counsel for the defense. He said he had attentively listened yesterday to the arguments, or rather readings, of Judge Hardy, but the effect had not been to alter his opinion on the question pending. He read a few New York and California practice, in regard to forms of complaint. California in adopting the code of New York, adopted the judicial construction of the Judges of New York with it. In an action of ejectment, which is an action of law, the plaintiff must recover, if he recover at all, by his legal title. But we claim the right to join in our complaint our legal and equitable title, so if the former is insufficient by virtue of the Panaca location, we then can support our claim on the effect had not been to alter his opinion on the question pending. He read a few things out of 40 or 50 volumes which fitted his case, and many things that didn't. He failed to convict us of erro-nous opinions; in fact, he shunned the question. His New York and California references were invaniently. we then can support our claim on the equitable ground. Under our legal title our rights are to be tried before the jury; but if our agents, while acting in their fiduciary capacity, wrongfully possessed themselves of our property, then we may references were inapplicable—especially the case of the tax sale in California the case of the tax sale in California. In that case the agent got a deed for property which was the principal's, and of course it was declared void. But in this case the plaintiff never had a right seek relief in the equity branch of our complaint. The two causes are very properly joined. [Illustrates by the case of a mortgage for closure. [ If you strike out all the equity portions of our com-plaint, of course we would have nothing to stand on but our legal rights, but the to our property or a title that was worth a cent. The proposition is that legal and equitable causes of action cannot be joined. Now, that distinction is clearly to stand on but our legal rights, but the modern practice gives us the privilege of joining legal and equitable right, and we may blend both in this action. The defendants have waived their right to object to the evidence, by not, in the beginning, interposing their demurrer. All the authorities agree that when a complaint is filed and answered, the Court shall grant the ruing asked for as may be warranted by the facts clicited. In filing their answer the defendants waive all errors of law in the complaint. joined. Now, that distinction is clearly defined and prescribed in and by the Constitutions of New York, California and Nevada. In this case we have a title, which they have got to divest us of, before they can get along with their case; but how will they bring about this divestment when they claim in their complaint that the fee simple is in themselves? It is very different from the reforming of a deed; in that case the Court will refer the deed back to the time of execution, and make it conform to the intentions of waive all errors of law in the complaint and make it conform to the intentions of the parties. In the case before us no conveyance was ever made. [He reads the complaint.] Thus we see they set up a full ind complete cause of action in ejectment. The face of the complaint shows this—it is ejectment, and nothing great care, the best counsel on the coast hoving been consulted in its construc-tion, and it will withstand the closest scrutiny. When we put Lightner and scrutiny. When we put Lightner and Perley over our property as our agents, we had possession of and some kind of title to the property; they were sent there to strengthen and protect our title, and they were legally incapable of de-stroying or weakening it, or creating at-verse rights. If Perley undertock to protect the company's rights he was as much bound to do so as if acting under a written contract. The same rule holds in regard to superintendents. Any difelse. They awear they are the owners in fee; and then they come in with a second cause of action, or after thought. to charge Colonel Light-Mr. Perley with some improper conduct. Now, ill we treat this mongrel how shall we treat this mon complaint? If the first cause alle a written contract. The same rule holds in regard to superintendents. Any different doctrine would be shocking to every sense of right and justice. [Here Judge Mesick asked if Perley would have been debarred from making a location on ground claimed by the company employing him, if it had been decided by that the absolute title is in themselves, how can they get a title from us? The complaint is self-destructive. Why didn't we demur? Because we could not—you cannot demur to a part of a complaint. The second cause of action proceeds on the hypothesis that we have no title, the first and second causes being the Supreme Court of Nevada that the com-pany's claim had not the alightest foun-dation in right or justice. Judge Garber contradictory of each other. The com-plaint is inconsistent with itself, and is inharmonicus. The first cause is of the replied by reading an authority (a Cali-fornia case) showing that an agent could not establish to his private benefit adnature of ejectment, and the second is, nature of ejectment, and the second is, if it is anything, a prayer for a temporary injunction. Must they not be compelled to stand on one ground or the other? Judge Hardy said the complaint is, under our laws and according to the verse interests and rights in property to which his principal laid the slightest claim, legal or illegal. The reason for this rule is obvious. The knowledge the agent must have of the principal's busi-ness would be the very means by which he could create or cause such adverse ingeneral law, a single cause of action. No distinction exists under the Civil Practice Act of Nevada between legal and equitable causes of action. If they con-tend that our titile is worthless, why terests, and, therefore, from the nature of his trust, there must be no conflict between duty and interest. Evidence admitted, and exceptions endon't they wait till we assert it? they can assail us in rebuttal, the only way a regular action at only way a regular action at law is can be conducted. (Reads 3 Nev., tered.

Henry Rives recalled—My name was used as one of the Hermes locators; was then in the State of Virginia; I returned the same month the Hermes was located—August, 1871; conveyed my interest in September of the same year; conveyed it at Periey's request; I know McLane, who once owned two claims on the Monitor lode; have hin in September, 1871; be then lived in Bullionville; I bought and can be conducted. (Reads 3 Nev., p. 30.) In this case the plaintiff is adjudged to have a right to proceed in an action at law to recover before a jury, but he has not the right to ask for ejectment (?) in this action, as he blends his legal and equitable causes. They must try their title, and if they lose it and find we have it, then they may seek relief in centry. and can be it, then they may seek relief in equity.

They must show they have not the title, before they can assail our title; but instead of this they assert the fee simple is in themselves. (Reads 19 Cal., p. he then lived in Bullionville: I bought his claims with a check for $150 on Wells, Fargo & Co., it was paid out of the part-nership funds of Ferley & Rives; the first conveyance was not in my name; af-terwards it was conveyed to me. THAT PISTOL SHOT. - A ridiculous scene was enacted yesterday on Meadow Valley street. At the report of a pistol, a man named Frank Brotherton, formerly proprietor of the California restaurant was seen to place his hand to his breast stagger and fall. A crowd soon collected, thinking it was suicide, but, upon lifting the drunken and half-demented "shootist," not a scratch could be found. The ball instead of touching him, had cut a hole through the awning over his head As he could not satisfactorily explain the cause of his shooting, and to save further trouble, he was carefully taken in charge by an officer, and hidden from the cold charities of the world. This careless display of firearms seems to be becoming epidemical. Men who thus loosly take chances of being booked for murder, should in gary case be punished to the extreme extent of the law. A peaceable law abiding citizen cannot tell what moment his anatomy is to be punctured, or made a "tom iron" of by some of the chase of whom we speak. The excuse of being drank, instead of easing the charge,, should make it more culpable. The glory of dying from the effects of a ball centered by "a d—m good fellow, only he was a little tight," is a cud that few care to leave to their families for mastication. We trust that the cold charities of the world. families for mastication. We trust that vigorous prosecution will attend any cases that may be reafter come up.

FRIGHTFUL RUNAWAY. - Yesterday a two-horse team attached to a lumber wagon, in the rear of Sherwood's, took fright and stated to run; as their noses were pointed down grade, it required but little exertion on their parts to increase their velocity-ere a hundred yards were passed their speed was appalling—"going," as a bystander ex-pressed it, "seventy feet at a jump," Turning a little from the road, they made directly for the dwelling of Richardson. Passing either side of a heavy fence post, which marks the boundary of his post, which marks the houndary of his lot, they again turned, this time going full tilt against, and through a small cabin occupied by men in employ of Delmor, the dairy man. To say that they vacated lively, would but poorly describe the scene. As if sagitated they sped, nor stood upon their order of going. The horses by this time had succeeded in demolishing some harness, and a little house and wagon. As if satisfied with their exploit for one day. satisfied with their exploit for one day, they allowed themselves to be captured and led away. Yo insurance.
